

Recut reclaimed oak

Historisch Hout

Historisch Hout imports reclaimed timber from old granaries & wine presses from south-east Balkan countries. These often abandoned barns are bought from the local managers, after which the barns are demolished by hand. The beams are sorted by length and quality and packed into transportable packages. These reclaimed oak planks and beams are often over 150 years old! When the beams arrive in the Netherlands, they first receive a heat treatment against any pests. After this, the reclaimed oak is recut into usable fine planks, which can then be planed or brushed.

These recut reclaimed oak planks are extremely durable and have a characteristic, robust and warm look! The planks are naturally dry and very suitable for use in furniture! Recut reclaimed oak planks are a good alternative for wagon planks! In addition to processing into planks, Barnwood is also very popular for use in furniture.
